This year's summit at the company's headquarters in East Rutherford, NJ, was the largest yet. It expanded beyond Extech's internal team to include women leaders from companies such as Feury Image Group, Jerry Manna & Associates, and Lizza & Associates, as well as past summit speakers. The event provided a space for attendees to connect, share experiences, and engage in activities designed to foster confidence and collaboration.

A tradition of empowerment and connection

Extech President and CEO Tim Feury welcomed guests before introducing Executive Vice President Tina Nocera, host of the annual gathering. Nocera then shared the inspiration and purpose behind the event.

“We created this summit to provide a platform for the talented women in our organization to come together, learn from each other, and develop both personally and professionally,” said Nocera. “Every year, the energy and enthusiasm build, and this year’s event was no exception. Christina Clinton’s insights were invaluable, and it was incredible to see attendees leave feeling empowered and ready to take on new challenges.”

Clinton’s presentation focused on understanding and dealing with impostorism—a psychological phenomenon where individuals feel like intellectual or professional frauds despite evident success. She highlighted that both men and women experience this syndrome, noting that a significant majority of CEOs and entrepreneurs admit to struggling with its effects. The session resonated deeply with attendees, striking a chord as it addressed a challenge many professionals quietly face.

After the session, Clinton said, “It was very exciting to see this strong group of leaders embrace their unique strengths and brainstorm actionable steps to grow their confidence and conquer moments of doubt.”

The summit also featured interactive breakout sessions promoting self-awareness and professional growth, along with a hands-on team-building activity. Attendees received curated gift bags with motivational keepsakes designed to inspire long after the event, including the New York Times best-selling book The Let Them Theory by Mel Robbins, with her strategies to help “prioritize what truly matters and put
