Miryam: The Polluted Land Launches Today

A Tower Defense Game with a Deep Narrative Twist

Miryam: The Polluted Land takes the classic tower defense formula and infuses it with a rich, story-driven experience. Inspired by Plants vs. Zombies, the game challenges players to strategically deploy an arsenal of defensive structures to fend off relentless waves of nightmarish creatures. Unlike traditional tower defense games, Miryam removes manual resource farming mechanics, as resources are automatically collected, allowing players to focus on balancing resource-generating structures with defensive units and dynamically adjusting their strategy in real-time.

Key Features:

40+ Unique Enemies – Face an array of grotesque creatures, each with distinct attack patterns and vulnerabilities.

20+ Defensive Structures – Deploy a range of tactical defenses, from explosive clay pots to fog-clearing moths.

40+ Challenging Levels – Test your strategic skills across a variety of uniquely designed stages with escalating difficulty.

A Dark and Intriguing Storyline – Follow Miryam's journey through the eerie Land of Nod as she battles monstrous manifestations of her past.

“With Miryam: The Polluted Land, we wanted to create a tower defense game that feels fresh and immersive,” said Song, Lead Developer at 6.5F Studio. “We kept the strategy and challenge fans love, but removed some of the repetitive mechanics to let players focus on combat and adaptability. At the same time, we wanted the story to carry emotional weight—Miryam's journey is not just about survival but about confronting her past and finding strength within herself.”
