“We're excited to bring Lil' Diddies' to Amazon's vast customer base and look forward to collaborating with retailers and wholesalers who share our vision of combining functionality, comfort, and style in the tech accessory market,” said Cathy Nadolsky, Founder and CEO of Lil' Diddies'.

A successful initial sales launch has proven that customers love Lil' Diddies' for the softness and squishiness of the silicone material that makes it a pleasure to hold, akin to holding a cloud, which significantly reduces the strain on fingers and hands. This is particularly beneficial for those who spend a lot of time on their devices, such as answering messages or playing games, as it provides excellent support and comfort. Additionally, the slip covers offer superior protection against drops and falls, making them ideal for users who frequently drop their phones. They are also versatile, fitting perfectly over existing cases and allowing users to prop up their devices securely without them sliding, which is especially useful for activities like watching shows. Users report that the product has made a noticeable difference in improving hand health and providing a comfortable grip that feels like a significant upgrade from standard accessories.
