Bellevue's Theatre33 heads to the AACT National Festival to represent Washington State with their award-winning production of Constellations.

BELLEVUE, WA, UNITED STATES, April 1, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The stars have aligned—literally—for Theatre33, Washington's boldest and brightest independent theatre company. After dazzling audiences and judges at the state and regional levels, the troupe is heading to the AACT National Theatre Festival this June in Des Moines, Iowa, to present their critically acclaimed production of Constellations by Nick Payne.

WA Bellevue's Community Theatre: Theatre33

Starring Christophe Peyras and Era Pogosova, Constellations explores love, time, and infinite possibilities across a universe of parallel moments. With a script that bends the rules of physics and a performance that breaks hearts and expectations, this production has proven itself unstoppable—just like the gravity between its two characters.

Representing Washington State is an immense honor—We look forward to showcasing the emotional power and artistic ambition that define our local theatre community.”

“Representing Washington State is an immense honor,” says the director and company co-founder Marianna Chebotaryova. “We look forward to showcasing the emotional power and artistic ambition that define our local theatre community.”

Theatre33 is no stranger to ambitious work, but Constellations has been a standout journey—even by their standards. After taking top honors at the Washington state festival, they moved on to the regional competition, where they once again stole the spotlight. With just two actors, minimal set, and maximum emotional gravity, the production stood out in a field of high-caliber contenders.

The AACTFest National Festival, hosted by the American Association of Community Theatre, brings together the country's best community theatre productions for a week of performance, professional development, and celebration. Theatre33 will perform among a select group of national finalists, representing not only the state of Washington but a growing wave of intimate, actor-driven storytelling on the American stage.

And while the production may be headed for Iowa, the countdown is already on back home in Bellevue. Theatre33 is actively fundraising to help cover travel and production costs, inviting fans and supporters to be part of this incredible journey.
