“This is an exciting new adventure,” said Weinkauf. “I've dedicated my career to increasing the quality of autism interventions across multiple settings. That includes my clinical work and my contributions to the behavior analytic literature. At CASP, I'm excited to leverage that experience—and my genuine passion—to develop resources that solve members' problems, strengthen the field, and help increase quality of care for people with autism.”

CASP CEO Lorri Unumb said, “Ever since joining CASP, I've been wanting to create the position of director of education and resources. Our continuing education events and cutting-edge resources—such as our ABA Practice Guidelines—have made a huge impact in the field. But there's so much more we can do.

“Sara’s unique blend of clinical experience and published research makes her the perfect candidate for this role. We’re going to take our education and resources to a new level—building on the high quality our membership has come to expect.”
