

DiMone Parlier Plumbing & Irrigation Featured in HelloWilmington for Expert Tips on Preventing Household Pipe Clogs

Should you Pour Grease Down the Sink?

WILMINGTON, NC, UNITED STATES, April 7, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- How can homeowners avoid one of the most common plumbing problems before it starts? In the latest edition of HelloWilmington, Al Dimone of DiMone Parlier Plumbing & Irrigation offers practical, preventative advice for keeping residential plumbing systems running smoothly and clog-free.

As highlighted in the feature, Dimone outlines several key practices that significantly reduce the likelihood of clogs. He emphasizes the importance of awareness in the kitchen and bathroom, noting that many blockages originate from everyday items being improperly disposed of. Grease, oils, and fats should never be poured down the sink, as they tend to harden inside the pipes. Food particles, hair, and soap residue are also common contributors to buildup. Installing and regularly cleaning strainers in sinks, showers, and bathtubs is a simple but highly effective step toward preventing these issues.

Dimone also calls attention to the challenges posed by non-flushable items, particularly in homes with young children. Even products labeled as "flushable" can accumulate in the plumbing system over time and lead to backups. For ongoing maintenance, he recommends the use of bacterial drain cleaners that safely break down organic materials without damaging pipes or harming the environment.

The advice shared by Dimone underscores the importance of regular maintenance and mindful disposal habits. By following these straightforward recommendations, homeowners can avoid costly repairs and maintain efficient plumbing systems year-round. Read the full article here
