A decisive season, solid preparation

We've got the car, the crew, and the experience. I've never felt more ready to fight at the front and chase results across Europe and Asia this season”

Romain Leroux

After a year of steady progress in 2024, Romain Leroux heads into 2025 with fresh momentum. Still driving the Aston Martin Vantage GT3 with Walkenhorst Motorsport, he's ready to make his mark in what is set to be the most competitive Silver Cup season yet, with 18 entries on the grid. The goal is clear: fight at the front and contend for top results.

Last year, Romain scored a podium finish at Monza. With a well-managed race from both drivers and team, he achieved a solid third place. This key result shows the progress made over the course of the season and further strengthens his motivation for the season ahead.

"I'm more ready than ever"

"Last year, I learned a lot: about the new car, how to manage strategy in endurance races, the dynamics of the team... This season, I really feel ready. We have a high-performance car, which the team now knows very well, and a solid crew. The objective is simple: to be consistent and minimize mistakes, which is crucial in GT world challenge to aim for the best possible results and victories."

A prestigious calendar, huge challenges

Romain will return to the finest circuits of Europe: Paul Ricard (April 11-13), Monza (May 30-June 1), Spa-Francorchamps (June 25-29) and Barcelona (October 10-12). Such an array of venues allows him to compete in the highest category and to showcase his full potential.

Partners to back him all the way

Throughout the season, Romain counts on committed partners such as AdvanIDe, Pourquoi Pas and PRFM for their support. These strategic partnership to allow him to aim for excellence.

An international program

Alongside his commitment to European endurance racing, Romain will also be taking part in the Thai Super Series (TSS) in Asia with Team NZ. This participation will give him the opportunity to discover new circuits and face top-level competition, reinforcing his experience and versatility in GT racing.
