Founded in 2019, RGX has reshaped how businesses handle electronics recycling by removing third-party barriers and making it easier for companies to act on sustainability goals without the typical logistical headaches.

“

Our goal is to make e-waste recycling easy, safe, and sustainable for everyone.”

Paul Logsdon, COO of RGX

“As a proud Colorado company, we’re especially excited to be part of Circularity 2025 right here in our own backyard,” said Sean Miles, CEO of RGX. “This event gives us the chance to connect with others leading the charge toward smarter, cleaner, and more profitable circular practices.”

The RGX platform is the only neutral marketplace that automates and tracks the full lifecycle of enterprise e-waste—from competitive bidding through final certification of destruction. By giving clients access to a vetted network of local service providers, RGX helps reduce emissions, increase data security, and keep valuable materials in circulation.

“We built RGX to solve a real problem; businesses want to do the right thing, but the process is too complex,” said Paul Logsdon, COO of RGX. “Our goal is to make e-waste recycling easy, safe, and sustainable for everyone.”

Attendees at Circularity 2025 can stop by Booth 118 to explore RGX's tech platform, learn how to improve ROI on retired equipment, and see real-world results from clients in telecom, finance, healthcare, and beyond.
