

Parenting and Finances: Navigating the Stressors of Family Life

MINNEAPOLIS, MN, UNITED STATES, April 18, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- From prioritizing college tuition to choosing how to compensate their children, parents are facing financial pressures to provide their children with the best life possible. Many parents worry the tradeoffs they're making now will impact their long-term financial futures. Parents have opportunities to shore up their finances.

Deana Healy, Vice President of Financial Planning & Advice at Ameriprise, shares insights into how parents can approach their family finances with confidence and how to raise financially savvy kids.

Parents' number one financial concern is how the tradeoff decisions they're making today will impact their children's financial future. Raising financially savvy kids starts with having open and honest conversations about money. Financial advisors are powerful resources and can help parents determine the best way to maximize their hard-earned savings by creating a detailed financial plan.
