

2. Breakout Trading and Mean Reversion — What's the Difference?

Breakout Trading and Mean Reversion are two of the most popular trading strategies. Breakout Trading is a strategy that involves trading when the price of a security breaks out of a range of prices. Mean Reversion is a strategy that involves trading when the price of a security returns to its mean. Both strategies can be used to profit from market movements, but they are based on different principles. Breakout Trading and Mean Reversion — What's the Difference?
