Welcoming the world's top professionals in gastroenterology, hepatology, GI endoscopy, gastrointestinal surgery, and related fields, Digestive Disease Week grants provider platforms like Allied Digestive Health the opportunity to connect with fellows, engage with industry experts, and stay up to date on clinical innovation while sharing its mission of delivering patient-centered care.

ADH Booth at Digestive Disease Week

“We are looking forward to exhibiting again at Digestive Disease Week 2025,” says Beverly Coleman, Chief Human Resources Officer, Allied Digestive Health. “The 2024 conference provided invaluable connections with physicians and professionals nationwide, significantly expanding our knowledge base. We are committed to continuously seeking new opportunities to enhance the physician and patient experience, and DDW consistently offers an ideal environment to achieve that goal.”

The Allied Digestive Health booth will be open to conference attendees from May 4-6, featuring information about the organization's culture and extensive network of practices throughout New York and New Jersey. Attendees are also invited to visit the booth to discover the innovative technologies and services ADH consistently invests in to enhance patient care. This includes the recent implementation of an AI-powered clinical notetaker, which has significantly streamlined workflows for ADH providers, enabling them to dedicate more time to direct patient interaction.

Fellows and recent graduates can connect with Allied Digestive Health at both their exhibit booth and the DDW Career Fair. The Career Fair is an excellent avenue to explore potential career paths, understand benefits and the partner track structure, and discover how ADH is shaping the future of digestive healthcare. Both platforms provide valuable opportunities to network with the ADH executive team and gain insight into the company culture.

“Connecting with the newest minds in gastroenterology is critical for progressing our treatment plans and continuing to provide the best care possible for our patients,” Coleman continues. “As Allied Digestive Health continues to grow, we welcome the insight and passion that new fellows, recent graduates, and seasoned professionals bring to our practices across New York and New Jersey.”
