“Over the past 20 years, we’ve proudly trained hundreds of students from Vancouver, Camas, Battle Ground, Ridgefield, and throughout Clark County at our Hillsboro, Oregon campus,” said Tyler Reisnaur. “As demand has continued to grow, we recognized the need to bring our training closer to home for our Washington students. The new Brush Prairie campus allows us to better serve the community with greater accessibility, while continuing to deliver the highest-quality CDL training possible, which has always been our top priority.”

“For years, our industry partners, including trucking companies, WorkSource Washington, the Veterans Administration, and the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation, have encouraged us to expand north of the river,” said J.J. Reisnaur, who will oversee operations at the new campus. “Our reputation for delivering high-quality CDL training, personalized instruction, and using top-tier equipment has created strong demand in southwest Washington. This new campus in Brush Prairie allows us to better serve our Washington students and continue providing the exceptional training and support they deserve.”

The new Vancouver campus will help meet the trucking industry’s critical need for well-trained drivers while maintaining the high standards Elite Truck School is known for. Residents of Clark, Cowlitz, and Skamania counties now have a closer and more convenient location to pursue their CDL certification and begin their journey toward a successful trucking career.
