

Johnny's Perspective: Photos That Feel Like a Memory

From candid moments to heartfelt memories, Johnny captures more than photos, he tells real stories through his lens, across Malta's stunning backdrops.

SLIEMA, SLIEMA, MALTA, April 24, 2025

/EINPresswire.com/ -- There's this thing about photography. Some people pick it up later in life, others kind of grow up with it in the background. Always there, always calling. For Johnny, it started early. Way back when he was still a kid and totally obsessed with disposable vacation cameras. Then came an old Zenit his dad picked up at some garage sale. That was it. Game on.

Johnny

“I don't even know if there was a start point,” he says. “It was always there. Just got more interesting the more I explored it.”

For a while, landscapes were the thing. The kind of peaceful scenes where no one talks and the light just does its thing. But then came that day in Valletta back in 2017. Springtime. A girl in a blue dress, freckles everywhere, glowing kind of smile. “I used to be too shy to ask people for photos, but that day I just went for it. She said yes. That moment changed everything.”

And just like that, people became the focus. Portraits turned into couples. Then lifestyle. Then weddings. A different kind of storytelling with real emotion.

Seeing Things Differently

The name Johnny's Perspective isn't just a branding idea. It means something. “It's how I see people and the world, but also how I try to understand how they see themselves. I don't want to just show what I see. I want to show them the way they feel.”

The style is natural and relaxed. Mostly candid with just enough guidance to keep it flowing. “I'm not here to pose you like a mannequin. I want the photos to look real and feel real. Not just what the day looked like, but what it felt like."

And people seem to get that. Some of his reviews go like this:

"Johnny is super easy to work with, very thoughtful with every shot"

"He knows where to shoot and how to bring the best out of you"

"Creative, chill, fast with delivery and the photos were just amazing"

You get the idea. He's not loud or pushy on set. Just someone who knows what he's doing and brings good energy with him.

Moments That Stick

One of the most memorable shoots was a proposal at Fomm ir-Riħ. "Man, that one hit hard. So raw, so full of emotion. Just love, pure and simple. Being there for that kind of moment... it's wild."

He shoots all over Malta. Mdina, San Anton Gardens, cliffside spots like Migra l-Ferħa. "Malta's a dream for photographers. There's something different around every corner. Mdina especially. Less crowded than Valletta and more traditional. But honestly, I could list twenty places that are perfect."

There's even this place called Selmun he hasn't shot at yet. "Looks amazing but it takes a bit of a hike to get there. One day though."

From 9 to 5 to This

The move from corporate wasn't some dramatic mic drop. It was more like a slow realisation. "I liked parts of my old job. The teamwork. The salary. But even in a creative role, it never gave me the kind of satisfaction I get from photography. Working with people and capturing real moments just hits different."

And in the end, that's the point. It's not about building a brand or pushing content. It's about giving people something to hold onto.
