Real Meat. Real Science. Real Solutions.

This collaboration marks an important step in Meatable's efforts to produce cultivated meat at a price point that is increasingly competitive with conventional meat at a commercial scale. The new facility will be the first in Singapore to deliver cultivated meat at the cost levels and volumes required to support commercial partners in formulating, testing, and launching products in the market. TruMeat brings extensive experience in media development and process optimization that enables production at scale.

This is the next step in our journey to make cultivated meat accessible and affordable. We have full trust in TruMeat's expertise, and together, we are confident in our ability to scale efficiently.”

Jeff Tripician, CEO of Meatable

"This is the next step in our journey to make cultivated meat accessible and affordable," said Jeff Tripician, CEO of Meatable. "We have full trust in TruMeat's expertise, and together, we are confident in our ability to optimize processes and scale efficiently. This collaboration brings us closer to providing the meat industry with the solutions it needs to deliver great tasting, sustainable meat to customers and consumers worldwide."

"We recognize that Meatable is a clear leader in the cultivated meat space, and we have been waiting for a technology with this potential," said James Chui, Chairman of TruMeat. "We are very confident that by combining our strengths, we can achieve the necessary cost reductions and the commercial scale to make cultivated meat a viable option for global markets."
