Children thrive when they feel safe, supported, and engaged in meaningful learning experiences. That's why our Relationship-Centered Learning approach prioritizes trust, connection, and autonomy.”

Academy, the leading online private K-12 school for student-driven learning, today announces a new online K-5 program where learning is not confined to a classroom—instead, it happens everywhere, through play, projects, relationships, and real-world experiences.

In WonderED's K-5 Collaborative, its youngest learners develop foundational skills through:

- Play-based and experiential learning that fosters creativity and problem-solving.
- Developmentally appropriate academics designed to build confidence in literacy, numeracy, and critical thinking.
- A collaborative partnership between educators and Place-Based Learning Partners (parents, caregivers, or mentors) to guide students toward independence.

WonderED is now accepting applications for the 2024/25 school year, and interested parents are encouraged to schedule a Discovery Call with WonderED educators to determine if the K-5 Collaborative would be a good fit for their child.
