The official ceremony will begin at 12 p.m. with the ribbon cutting and Campus tours to follow. This celebration will bring together local and state leaders, industry partners, and community members to mark this exciting milestone.

“

This new location allows us to expand access to life-changing career training and deepen our impact on the region's workforce”

Matt Daly

More than 50 representatives from local and regional organizations are expected, including:

- Mid-Atlantic Association of Career Schools
- Career Education Colleges and Universities (CECU)
- Mayor's Office of Small, Minority Business Advocacy and Development
- Baltimore County Department of Economic and

Workforce Development

- Baltimore City Council
- Baltimore County Government
- Maryland Higher Education Commission (MHEC)

- More than 20 local and regional employers

The new Wabash Avenue facility represents a major investment in Baltimore's skilled workforce. With expanded training areas and updated equipment, the new campus is designed to meet growing student demand and better prepare graduates for high-demand careers in welding, HVAC, diesel technology, building construction, electrical technology, commercial truck driving, and more.

"This new location allows us to expand access to life-changing career training and deepen our impact on the region's workforce," said Matt Daly, Campus President. "We're thrilled to welcome the community to celebrate with us."

The event is open to the public. Media, employers, prospective students, and community members are invited to attend.

About North American Trade Schools

Since 1971, North American Trade Schools (NATS) has been training individuals to enter the skilled trades. What started as a diesel technician training school has grown into a full career training school teaching seven trade programs for the greater Baltimore area.
