When you consider all of the creative ways that neurodivergent children can think, it's spectacular that we can provide an environment that can be so robust.”

Taylor Cole, Founder

Taylor Cole, Founder of Burble Creativity, is one of the keynote speakers and will share how his diverse experiences — from engineering to extreme sports — inspired a revolutionary storytelling approach called Minimally Defined Immersion (MDI), which is now being used to support individuals with autism. his personal journey, the inspiration behind Burble’s innovation, and how storytelling technology can help children with autism express themselves, regulate emotions, and find joy in learning.

"If we can communicate to somebody without telling them what to think and leave it open to their own brain and their own creativity, they can create a story that is all their own," explained Cole. "When you think of the creative ways that neurodivergent children can think, it's spectacular that we can provide an environment that can be so robust as to be able to handle any storytelling style that these kids may need. And I think there's something powerful in that."
