VHS Learning

VHS Learning is a nonprofit organization with 27 years of experience providing world-class online programs to students and schools everywhere.

Carol DeFuria, President & CEO of VHS Learning.

VHS Learning collaborates with schools of all types — urban, rural, public, and private — to expand their programs of study. Among the courses being offered this fall are AP® African American Studies, Fashion Design, and Hospitality and Tourism: Traveling the Globe. VHS Learning courses are also available to Homeschool students.

AP® African American Studies examines the diverse social, political, and cultural experiences of Afro Descendant people in the Americas. The course's four units cover a 3,000-year period and include Origins of the African Diaspora; Freedom, Enslavement and Resistance; The Practice of Freedom; and Movements and Debates. Participating students will develop data analysis skills as they engage with primary and secondary source materials. Students must also complete a summer assignment that consists of reviewing prerequisite content and critical concepts before beginning the course. In addition, they will complete an individual project that requires analysis of four related sources on a topic of their choice.

Students taking Fashion Design explore career and entrepreneurial opportunities in the fashion industry, sustainable fashion, and the ways in which fashion welcomes people with disabilities. Students will gain technical knowledge such as various hand or machine stitches and the appropriate tools and fabrics for different projects. They will also learn how to communicate assertively and how to positively present their skills, talents, and interests.

In Hospitality and Tourism: Traveling the Globe students investigate different businesses within the hospitality and tourism industries and explore the impact of tourism on local, national, and global levels. Course participants will also discover what's involved in operating tourist locations, creating marketing for leisure and travel, spotting trends, and planning events.

Adding VHS Learning courses is quick and easy, as VHS Learning provides the course instructors and curriculum, as well as its team of helpful online learning experts. Schools work with their students to schedule VHS Learning courses into their standard school day, just like any other course offered at the school.
