

Klar Sets a New Standard in Acoustic Design with Luxury Panels Tailored to Every Space

Custom acoustic panels that match your space, your needs, and your style – all without compromise.

SINGAPORE, SINGAPORE, May 14, 2025

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Klar is a new name in acoustic design, but it's already setting itself apart with a simple promise: no two spaces are the same, so no two acoustic panels should be either. With a strong focus on customisation, Klar offers sound solutions that don't just work well — they look good too.

At Klar, we understand that every space is different, and so are our clients. That's why we take the time to listen, understand what they need, and offer acoustic solutions that not only perform well.”

James Lee, Sales Executive at Klar

Whether it's a quiet corner in a home office or a large open-plan workspace, Klar's panels are built to suit the way people actually use their spaces. This means listening to what clients want, adjusting to how rooms sound, and designing panels that blend right into the overall look and feel of a place.

Klar isn't about off-the-shelf answers. Every panel is made with care, with the right materials and the right finish for the job. Clients get to choose how things look and how they perform. The result is a product that fits just right both acoustically and visually.

“At Klar, we understand that every space is different, and so are our clients. That's why we take the time to listen, understand what they need, and offer acoustic solutions that not only perform well, but also fit beautifully into their environment. It's not just about acoustic panels — it's about creating something that feels right for each customer.”

Klar's team works directly with interior designers, architects, and homeowners to understand what each space needs. Instead of pushing set templates or forcing people to work around a standard design, they start with the client's goals and build from there. Every panel is crafted to match the sound levels, layout, and style of the room it's going into.

The materials used are carefully chosen not just for how they sound, but for how they look and feel. Whether it's soft fabrics or natural wood tones, Klar's range is designed to work in homes, offices, hotels, and retail spaces without looking out of place. These are panels that blend in when they need to — and stand out when you want them to.

Klar also cares about doing things the right way. The brand is working to reduce waste by choosing sustainable materials wherever possible and focusing on quality that lasts. It's about offering real value — products that are built to perform and built to last.

As people become more aware of how sound affects their day-to-day lives, Klar is stepping in with answers that are practical and beautiful. The launch of Klar shows that acoustic design doesn't have to be boring or basic. It can be part of what makes a space feel complete.

Now open for new projects, Klar invites designers, builders, and anyone working on a space to explore how better sound can make a big difference — and how acoustic panels can be part of the design, not an afterthought.
