LONDON, GREATER LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, May 13, 2025

/EINPresswire.com/ -- The market for

Huntington's disease has seen a sharp increase in recent years. It is estimated to grow from $0.47 billion in 2024 to $0.55 billion in 2025, indicating a compound annual growth rate CAGR of 18.1%. This growth in the historic period has been largely shaped by increasing awareness about chronic diseases, government awareness programs, initiatives to spread knowledge about Huntington's disease, a growing elderly population, and expanded research on genetic disorders.

So, what's driving the growth of the Huntington's disease market?

It's the rising prevalence of neurological disorders. These disorders affect the brain, spinal cord, and nerves, leading to symptoms such as movement disorders, coordination problems, sensory or cognitive impairments. The increase in neurological disorders is typically associated with factors such as aging populations, environmental toxins, lifestyle changes, improved diagnostic capabilities, and genetic predispositions, which can identify more cases. Hence, the increasing occurrence of these disorders is expected to push the growth of the Huntington's disease market forward.
