

Dynabyte Acquires MercuryWorks to Expand Custom Software Development and Digital Engineering Capabilities

Strategic acquisition merges two companies with closely aligned technical capabilities, shared values, and a mutual commitment to building impactful software.

ST. PETERSBURG, FL, UNITED STATES, May 13, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dynabyte, a leader in digital transformation consulting, today announced its acquisition of MercuryWorks, a Tampa-based custom software development firm known for delivering enterprise-grade digital solutions to growth-focused and mission-driven organizations.

This strategic acquisition brings together two companies with closely aligned technical capabilities, shared values, and a mutual commitment to building impactful, modern software. With MercuryWorks' proven expertise in cloud-native development, data platforms, and Microsoft technologies, Dynabyte is strengthening its ability to deliver sophisticated software solutions to clients across industries.

"We are incredibly excited to welcome the MercuryWorks team into Dynabyte," said Anders Lentell, CEO of Dynabyte Tech. "Their reputation for excellence in custom software development, combined with a culture that mirrors our own—collaborative, innovative, and client-first—makes this a powerful fit."

MercuryWorks has built a strong foundation over more than 25 years, partnering with clients to build digital platforms that power business growth, improve operations, and modernize legacy systems. "Dynabyte is the ideal partner to help lead the next stage of growth and technical advancement for MercuryWorks' clients," said Donald Bickel, Founding Partner of MercuryWorks. With the addition of MercuryWorks' talented team, Dynabyte gains deeper capabilities in product engineering, UI/UX design, and cloud application development.

The acquisition strengthens Dynabyte's presence in the U.S. while accelerating its ability to deliver high-value digital engineering services to a growing national client base. All MercuryWorks team members will be joining Dynabyte, ensuring continuity and the same high standard of client delivery. "I'm excited about the opportunities this creates for our clients and valued team members," stated Christopher Karlo, Partner of MercuryWorks.

"It's been a joy and a pleasure to work with both our new and existing team members on integrating our services and engagement models over the past few months," said Jonas Hedman, General Manager and COO of Dynabyte's U.S. operations. "Bringing these two organizations together under the Dynabyte name is not just about alignment—it's about elevating how we deliver value to our clients, expanding our capabilities, and building something greater than the sum of its parts."

"This move is about more than just combining capabilities—it's about a shared belief in how modern software should be delivered," added Anders Lentell. "Together, we're better positioned to help our clients move faster, think bigger, and build smarter."
