With a career spanning public health, law, transportation equity, and nonprofit leadership, tamika has become a driving force in the movement toward racial and social justice. Her work challenges institutions to not just acknowledge inequity, but to transform themselves through authentic care, accountability, and collaboration.

As the founder of Tamika L. Butler Consulting, tamika advises organizations nationwide on issues of diversity, inclusion, and systemic change. Her leadership roles at institutions like the Los Angeles Neighborhood Land Trust, the Los Angeles County Bicycle Coalition, and Toole Design underscore her deep commitment to intersectional public health, urban justice, and community-centered policy. tamika's work reflects the very values that drive CABWHP's mission to promote the health and wellbeing of Black women and girls: collaboration across communities, empowerment of marginalized voices, and an unapologetic centering of Black women's wellbeing, leadership, and liberation.

“tamika’s courageous leadership is a beacon for what it means to reimagine systems with care, justice, and truth at the center. Her work embodies the fierce spirit of Women Who Dared, and we are honored to celebrate her impact,” said Sonya Young Adam, CEO of California Black Women’s Health Project.
