Motivated by her own experience being diagnosed with Reflex Sympathetic Dystrophy (RSD) Syndrome (first documented during the Civil War) following a minor foot injury, Vita penned Got Pain? Now What? as a guide to help others develop essential skills for managing chronic pain. She lives by a philosophy centered on setting goals, maintaining a positive and grateful mindset, having faith, finding joy in laughter, pacing daily activities, eating well, and ultimately learning to enjoy life despite pain.

Recognizing her not only as a new member but also awarding her the Empowered Woman Resilience Award 2025 truly makes her a valued part of our movement to bring together icons changing the world.”

The International Order of Fantastic Professionals (IOFP) is excited to bring Vita Oyler into the IOFP membership, as her dedication to helping others lead their best life despite pain is remarkable. Her mindset of discovery brings a level of leadership that lends itself to innovation, part of the organization's mission.

"I am honored to be a part of IOFP and the recipient of the Empowered Woman Resilience Award of the Year 2025," said Vita Oyler. "I look forward to collaborating with like-minded professionals in creating programs designed to help others, in essence creating 'movements' together." Vita created a community event called Disability Awareness Day, which brings together the community to where they can navigate resources available for those with disabilities, developed by chronic pain. The event creates a tradeshow environment designed to help people navigate their way to a life worth living.

"We were amazed by Vita's story, her vision, accomplishments, and contributions in the chronic pain community," said Dr. Allen Lycka, President and CEO of the IOFP. "Recognizing her not only as a new member, but awarding her the Empowered Woman Resilience Award 2025 truly makes her a valued part of our movement to bring together icons changing the world."

Through her advocacy, education, and personal experience, Vita Oyler inspires others to reclaim their lives, proving that a fulfilling and joyful life is possible, even with chronic pain.
