Teams, a UK-based outsourcing company, is supporting business growth by helping organisations build and manage remote international teams. Specialising in the recruitment of fluent-English speaking professionals from South Africa, Future Teams enables businesses to scale efficiently while remaining compliant with local employment regulations.

Future Teams - Hire remote teams in South Africa

Future Teams helps businesses hire remote international teams.”

Future Teams

Future Teams directly employs its remote hires through its in-country entities, handling payroll, local taxation, and employment legislation. This comprehensive approach allows client companies to expand their teams without taking on the administrative burdens typically associated with international hiring. As part of a growing trend in outsourcing to South Africa, the company connects UKbased businesses with highly skilled remote workers through a streamlined employment model.

“There are many outsourcing companies operating globally, but none quite like Future Teams,” said a spokesperson for Future Teams. “We are the link between remote working fluent-English speaking South African staff and businesses based in the UK. Whether you need one or one hundred team members, our multi-sector approach to outsourcing can help you to quickly build remote teams without the compliance risks of hiring internationally.”

The company supports businesses across multiple sectors, offering the flexibility to adjust team sizes according to operational needs. Future Teams is characterised by its commitment to seamless service delivery, professionalism, and innovation in the remote work space. With remote work on the rise, outsourcing South Africa talent has become an effective strategy for businesses seeking cost-efficiency without compromising on quality.
