Curatorial Description

Nature is not a static backdrop—it is a living, breathing entity, ever-changing and deeply intertwined with our existence. Artists are invited to explore Nature: ArtNow -- the dynamic relationship between art and the environment. We call on artists to reinterpret the natural world in ways that challenge, celebrate, and re-envision its presence in our lives.

Through painting, digital and mixed media, this exhibition presents nature not just as subject matter but as collaborator, material, and inspiration. Some works embrace the organic flow of landscapes, translating the rhythms of wind, water, and growth into visual form. Others deconstruct and reconstruct the elements of nature, offering abstract visions of the earth. Together, they challenge us to see beyond the expected—to imagine nature in new forms, textures, and possibilities.

In an era of environmental uncertainty, NATURE ArtNow also serves as a reflection on our impact on the planet. It asks: How do we shape nature, and how does nature shape us? What role does creativity play in reimagining a sustainable future? This exhibition offers a response, weaving together themes of transformation, impermanence, and renewal.

Delighted to present artists whose nature-infused creations combine creative storytelling with timeless appeal—offering works of lasting impact and value.”
