

George Clinton's P-Funk Alum Satori Shakoor Breaks Menopause Stigma With "Confessions of a Menopausal Femme Fatale"

Bold, Comedic Stand-Up Storytelling Concert Film Explores Aging, Empowerment, and Life Beyond Hot Flashes—Premieres June 12 on VOD

DETROIT, MI, UNITED STATES, May 19, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- George Clinton's P-Funk alum and host of PBS's "Detroit Performs LIVE," Satori Shakoor, breaks the menopause stigma with her bold, comedic stand-up storytelling concert film, CONFESSIONS OF A MENOPAUSAL FEMME FATALE. As menopause takes center stage in the national conversation—fueled by Oprah Winfrey's "The Menopause Revolution"—Shakoor, a pioneer in redefining how menopause is discussed through fearless humor and cultural storytelling, delivers a resonant perspective on aging, womanhood, and the midlife experience, transforming silence and stigma into laughter and empowerment. Recorded at the Detroit Public Theater, the film premieres Thursday, June 12, on Amazon Prime, Apple TV+, and Google Play. Pre-orders begin June 1 on iTunes for Apple TV+.

CONFESSIONS OF A MENOPAUSAL FEMME FATALE is a fearless stand-up storytelling concert film in which Shakoor uses raw honesty, wit, music, and personal narrative to share her 12-year journey through menopause—a transformative experience that reshaped her identity as a woman, mother, artist, and human being. Framed around a return trip to Hawaii nearly 40 years after she once called it home, the story unfolds when a panic attack triggers deep introspection, forcing Shakoor to confront unresolved struggles, including addiction, postpartum depression, loss, and self-reinvention. Through wit, song, and unflinching truth, Shakoor breaks the silence surrounding menopause in a powerful performance that challenges stigma, invites laughter, and inspires radical self-acceptance.

"As public figures like Oprah, Halle Berry, and Maria Shriver open the dialogue on menopause, 'Confessions of a Menopausal Femme Fatale' brings this conversation home through humor, authenticity, and cultural resonance," says Shakoor. "With this film, I'm not just sharing my journey—I'm creating space for all women to embrace their power, laugh at the chaos, and reject the silence that's too often imposed on us."

Shakoor is a multidisciplinary artist, storyteller, and social entrepreneur. She is the founder and Executive Producer of The Secret Society of Twisted Storytellers®, an internationally recognized storytelling platform launched in 2012 to promote community healing and connection through personal narratives. Shakoor is also the host of Detroit Performs LIVE on Detroit PBS.

A former background singer with George Clinton's Parliament/Funkadelic as one of the "Brides of Funkenstein," Shakoor has built a diverse career spanning music, theater, television, and social advocacy. She is a 2017 Kresge Literary Arts Fellow and has collaborated with organizations such as Duke University, the University of Michigan, and the United Nations, facilitating storytelling workshops that address issues including racism, domestic violence, sexual assault, and refugee integration.
