Cali Van Zant

With over 45 years in the investment world, Chris Temple is renowned for his prescient “big picture” calls on markets, commodities, and geopolitics. As a writer, educator, and disruptor, he has guided investors through decades of market cycles, earning a reputation for uncovering early opportunities in sectors like uranium, gold, and energy. His motto, “You can get information anywhere...here, you get knowledge,” reflects his commitment to delivering clear, actionable insights. Temple's recent commentary on uranium's bullish supply-demand dynamics and gold's evolving story underscores his relevance in today's surging commodity markets, with gold up 29% and silver up 32.4% in 2025.

On June 2, Temple will lead an interactive session, diving deep into the hottest undervalued sectors—mining, energy, and commodities like silver, uranium, gold, and critical minerals. Attendees will have the chance to engage in live Q&A, learning how to spot undervalued stocks, manage risks, and profit in volatile markets. Participants will also receive a free “Mining Market Mastery 101” worksheet and enter giveaways for signed books, a one-month membership, and more.

“Chris Temple’s ability to distill complex market dynamics into practical strategies makes him the perfect speaker to launch our boot camp,” said Cali Van Zant, founder of The Equity Explorers and host of The Exploring Mining Podcast. “His insights will set the tone for a week of transformative education, helping investors turn volatility into opportunity.”

The boot camp, hosted by The Equity Explorers, stands out for its focus on education over hype. Unlike typical investment events, it features no stock pitches or pump-and-dump schemes—just expert-led guidance from investors like Temple, Peter Krauth, Jeff Clark, Philippe Gijssels, and Jean-Pierre Colin. The event explores commodities’ role in macroeconomics, policy shifts, and tech sectors like AI and Bitcoin, which rely on critical minerals.
