“It is an incredible honor to be recognized for our efforts. Our content team deserves this recognition for their commitment to ensuring the integrity of the information we provide.” said Cathy Heyne, president of Living Abroad.

Living Abroad's mission is to ensure global business travelers, international employees, and their families are well-informed, which is essential to staying safe abroad.

Their International Relocation Center provides detailed information on more than 240 destinations and 500 cities. Their Global Business Travel Center prepares employees for international business trips with destination reports and travel checklists for more than 150 destinations. Their Culture Coach Online provides companies with a self-paced interactive cultural learning platform to help their employees develop cultural agility at work and abroad.

“It’s an incredible to be honored for our efforts to keep travelers and assignees safe,” said Michael Cadden, vice-president, international operations. “We are grateful to the Forum for Expatriate Management for this recognition.”

The FEM EMMAs are the premier awards for the global mobility and International HR industry. EMMAs entries are rigorously judged by a team of impartial, experienced, industry veterans, who voluntarily provide their expertise. When adjudicating the awards, the judges commented: "Love to see the continuous evolution and alignment with global initiatives. Living Abroad's innovative and strategic incorporation of mental health, sustainability, and LGBTQ resources into their relocation services substantially enhances assignee support and aligns with modern ever-evolving global mobility needs."
