Led by Matt Thompson, a combat veteran of Operation Iraqi Freedom and licensed general contractor in both Florida and California, the company has completed major commercial and government projects, including work for Los Angeles Parks & Recreation, Fox Studios, Descanso Gardens, and numerous private and public schools throughout California and Florida.

Construction Corps is proudly certified as a:

- Service-Disabled Veteran-Owned Small Business (SDVOSB)
- Small Business Enterprise (SBE)
- Federal Contractor registered on SAM.gov

With licensing in General Construction, Electrical, Plumbing, and Mold Remediation, and a team of 8 specialized contractors, the company executes a diverse range of design-build projects including rehabilitation, new construction, and permit ready construction plans (blueprints).

Matt Thompson, who began his career remodeling hotels across the Midwest alongside his father, has now worked in 10 states across the U.S. His military service earned him the ARCOM with Valor, and his leadership style draws from that discipline, having even served as a technical advisor on Kathryn Bigelow's Oscar-winning film The Hurt Locker.

Construction Corps co-owner and wife Serena Lorian, born in London and a graduate of the prestigious Italia Conti Academy of Theatre Arts, brings a global and creative dimension to the business. A published poet, screenwriter, and former voice talent for Disney and Apple, Serena has shaped the company's messaging and branding, connecting the aesthetics of art with the precision of construction.
