What Is MAT—and Why It Works

Medication-Assisted Treatment (MAT) is a proven recovery model that combines FDA-approved medications with counseling and behavioral therapies to treat substance use disorders. The goal is simple: to help individuals reclaim their lives safely and sustainably, without the need for extended time away from work or family.

Naltrexone, a cornerstone of MAT, plays a key role in the treatment of both opioid and alcohol addiction. Unlike medications that replace the addictive substance, Naltrexone blocks the euphoric and sedative effects of opioids and alcohol, reducing cravings and preventing relapse.

MAT Recovery Centers utilizes Naltrexone in both oral and injectable forms (Vivitrol®) as part of its discreet treatment protocols, empowering clients to rebuild their lives without dependency or daily clinic visits. When combined with individualized counseling and peer support, MAT offers an unmatched path to lasting recovery.
