Pink Stork | The Wellness Brand for Women

At the forefront of this powerful movement is Amy Suzanne Upchurch, Founder + CEO of Pink Stork, mother of six, and a passionate advocate for holistic women's health. Amy will be featured in Empowered, sharing her deeply personal journey of faith, healing, and entrepreneurship, and how it has inspired the creation of Pink Stork's mission: to radically support and uplift women.

"Motherhood is not a solo journey—it takes a village. Through Empowered, we're showing women that they are seen, heard, and never alone," said Upchurch. "Pink Stork is honored to lead this conversation, offering women the tools, products, and encouragement they need to thrive."

Empowered dives into the real stories of women navigating motherhood from fertility and pregnancy to postpartum and into menopause. The documentary features emotional testimonials from customers who have found strength and healing through Pink Stork's natural products and supportive community.

"After years of struggling with fertility, Pink Stork gave me hope and healing. It was the first time I felt like someone understood what I was going through," shares one customer featured in the film.

Pink Stork's involvement in Empowered underscores its ongoing commitment to providing not only wellness solutions but also a sense of belonging for every woman, at every stage.

The documentary is scheduled for release on May 21, 2025, and will be available on major streaming platforms, with exclusive screenings and digital events planned throughout the launch.
