Truth and reason are eternal. They have prevailed. And they will eternally prevail; However, in times and places they may be overborne for a while by violence, military, civil, or ecclesiastical.”

US President Thomas Jefferson

Global Voices for Change

Dr. Bernard Fialkoff's opening remarks addressed the global leaders with a stirring call to save humanity, to empower world communities and to create a bold new future. " We enter today into global dialogue -To honor a universal longing. that transcends all individuals, every belief - Peace. The United Nations officially established May 16 as the International Day of Living in Peace - To promote tolerance, solidarity, and harmony among all peoples. And yet, as we gather today— we must confront a difficult truth - peace and our world are in grave peril (UNODC). While technology has leapt forward, our humanity often struggles to keep pace. Artificial intelligence advances with breathtaking speed— Yet loneliness and hatred spread with quantum speed (Pew Research Ctr). When we hurt one, we hurt all - When we uplift one, we uplift all. This is not just another conference, with the pronouncement of hopeful thoughts - No! This is a Call to Action for collaborative dedication - A united proclamation to herald a New Era for Mankind."

An impressive slate of international speakers added their voices, including:

Precept 20 The Way to Happiness

Peace begins with how we treat one another and our personal example. Imagine if we in this room decided to live, teach, defend and inspire others on these virtues. In a world often distracted by religious division; let us decide to respect the religious beliefs of others; and the divine right of man to seek their own truth; And let us re-ignite the universal wisdom of our traditions and philosophers—to live in compassion, tolerance, and justice.

Now, May 16, 2025 at the UN is not the end of a conference, but the beginning of a global movement - Where the International Day of Living Together in Peace is recorded in history as the moment mankind in his greatest global institution for collaboration, the United Nations, began a Golden Era that flourished and prospered To The Stars!
