HR Director*

As the Indy Auto Man HR Director, Ariel Tanner says, “Victor's boundless energy and creativity motivate all of us to professional and personal growth. He's the kind of person you can share any idea with, and he will listen, support, and offer valuable advice. His wealth of experience and dedication to constant learning and development made him an understanding leader whom everyone wants to follow.

On the other hand, Eugene, Indy Auto Man's General Manager, brings a thoughtful and methodical approach to the company. He plays a crucial role in ensuring that management processes run smoothly and provides clarity on roles and responsibilities. Eugene's commitment to order, systematization, and mentorship has helped cultivate a family-like atmosphere at Indy Auto Man".

Their complementary management styles create a strong basis for a productive working environment where self-development thrives alongside operational excellence, ultimately enhancing the entire organization.

New employees benefit greatly from a structured onboarding process, comprehensive training programs, and the unwavering support of their peers.

Together, Victor and Eugene inspire their team, driving growth and success within the Indy Auto Man dealership. Every member of the company mirrors their enthusiasm for each visitor and every customer.

This open and supportive management style fosters a culture of innovation, encouraging employees to share their ideas freely, which ultimately benefits the company through enhanced transformation.

As part of this development, Indy Auto Man embarks on the construction of its new dealership center. And the company is actively seeking a partner with expertise in building, renovating, and launching new facilities. Interested parties are encouraged to contact Indy Auto Man via the contact form on their website.
