

Collaborator.pro Lets Publishers Monetize Live Content

New feature enables publishers to earn more by offering link and anchor edits in existing articles.

TALLINN, ESTONIA, May 26, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Collaborator.pro, a PR distribution marketplace, has introduced a new feature that enables advertisers to request updates to anchor texts and URLs in previously published articles. The functionality allows publishers to offer post-publication edits for an additional fee or free of charge.

With the “Edit Published Articles” feature, SEO professionals no longer need to request full re-publications to update links. Instead, they can submit targeted change requests for published articles. Publishers are notified of each request and can either accept or decline the proposed changes.

Publishers (website owners) can choose how this service works: they can offer edits free of charge or for a fee (5%, 10%, 15%, or 20% of the current article placement price). Those who don't want to offer this service can keep this feature disabled.

Updates don't require website re-moderation and don't affect its status on the platform — the process is seamless and efficient.

Collaborator.pro continues to introduce major catalog updates, enhance the platform and unlock new features, helping SEO specialists and PR marketers to distribute their content. The “Edit Published Articles” feature is now available to all users — activate it today and turn your existing content into ongoing revenue.
