What are the critical factors driving the antibacterial medicated soap market?

A significant contributory factor to the antibacterial medicated soap market's anticipated growth is the increasing prevalence of infectious diseases. Infectious diseases, or illnesses caused by bacteria, viruses, or other germs, pose a severe public health risk and can spread from person to person, animals, or the environment. This prevalence is often due to increased global travel, allowing viruses and bacteria to spread swiftly across countries and continents. Antibacterial medicated soaps play an essential role in preventing the spread of these diseases by killing or reducing harmful germs on the skin. An example of this is data from the UK Health Security Agency, a UK-based government body, showing an upward trend in the influenza positivity rate in November 2024 - from an average of 3.3% in a preceding week to 3.9%. Consequently, the rising prevalence of infectious diseases is a key driver for the antibacterial medicated soap market's growth.
