“ACQ accreditation is more than a credential—it is a commitment to our clients and the broader community that we will uphold the highest standards of quality and excellence across all aspects of our organization,” said Ariana Boutain, Ph.D., BCBA-D, chief clinical officer of Atlanta Autism Center. “It affirms our dedication to continuous learning, improvement, and adaptability to meet the evolving needs of those we serve.”

Atlanta Autism Center provides center-based, early diagnostic, and multidisciplinary therapy services for children with autism age six and younger. It believes learning should be fun, which is why it takes a naturalistic, play-based approach to assessment and treatment. Above all, Atlanta Autism Center is dedicated to delivering compassionate, family-centered, and assent-based care for every child and family.

“People with autism deserve high-quality ABA services,” said Erick Dubuque, director of ACQ. “Organizations applying for accreditation from the Autism Commission on Quality must meet rigorous standards for patient care, administration, and transparency. Atlanta Autism Center underwent a thorough review process to earn its accreditation.”

ACQ's review process includes a wide range of business, clinical, and quality improvement activities to promote best practices and evidence-based pathways. The assessment considers clinical observations and satisfaction surveys from patients and staff, leadership interviews, and a desktop review.

ACQ continues to accept new applications for its two-year accreditation from organizations offering ABA as a healthcare service to individuals with autism.
