Fly to India at the Lowest Fares in Years with FlyDealFare

We're proud to help the Indian community in the U.S. and Canada find affordable flights to India, fostering reunions, memories, and smarter travel planning.”

Abhinandan Katoch

Historically, ticket prices tend to increase at the beginning of the year due to holiday travel and seasonal demand. Although recent fare trends showcased some declines in average costing of air tickets to India from the USA. Compared to the previous year, FlyDealFare has found a down nearly 20%-30% on average on international travel to India, especially between the USA and India. This trend reflects a potentially favourable period for travellers considering trips to India.

“We're seeing significantly lower fares in years for USA-India travel,” said the FlyDealFare CEO. “ This pattern reflects potential opportunities for travellers planning visits for personal, educational, or cultural reasons, including summer vacations or upcoming festivals such as Dussehra and Diwali 2025.”

Further, the CEO of FlyDealFare, Abhinandan Katoch, concluded, “We've always focused on helping the Indian community in the U.S and Canada to find the deals for flights to India. This moment is particularly special, not just because of the low fares, but because we know it means more families can reunite, more memories can be made, and more students and professionals can plan smart travel without financial strain.”

Travelers should be aware that fare trends may change due to fluctuating demand. Current fare trends for flights to India suggest a temporary decline in average ticket prices, presenting a potential opportunity for cost-conscious travel planning.
