

Data Foundation Hosts Virtual Event on Climate Performance Data Accessibility

Event examines pathways to trusted, investor-grade climate information

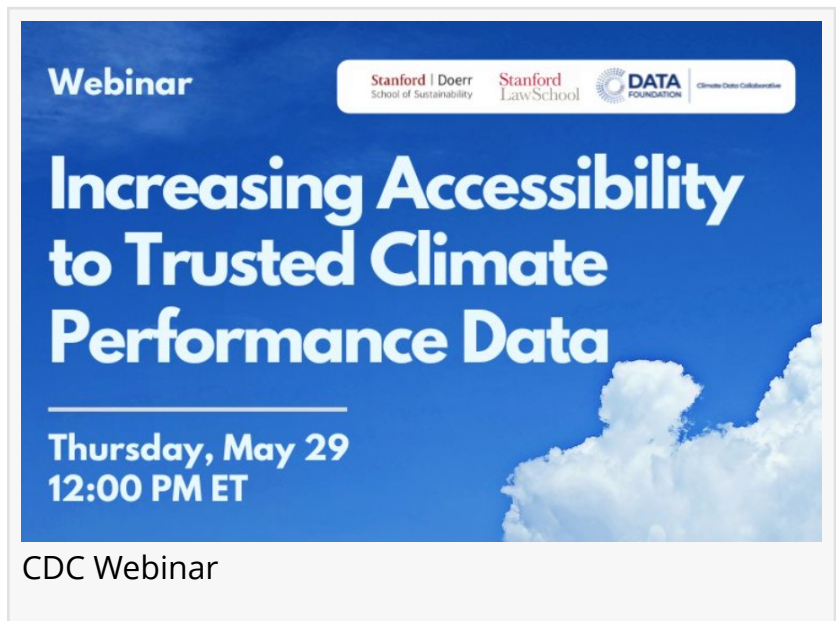

WASHINGTON, DC, UNITED STATES, May 29, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ --

WHAT: Virtual webinar "Increasing Accessibility to Trusted Climate Performance Data"

WHEN: Thursday, May 29, 2025, 12:00 PM - 1:00 PM ET

WHERE: Virtual event

WHO: The Data Foundation, featuring expert panel discussion

OVERVIEW: The Data Foundation's Climate Data Collaborative will host a virtual event examining how to improve access to trusted climate performance data for companies, investors, and policy-makers. The event will recap findings from a March 2025 conference and explore how modern data management tools can transform climate decision-making.

The webinar will address gaps in today's climate data landscape, where investor-grade performance information remains difficult to access despite growing demand for reliable metrics to quantify investment outcomes in greenhouse gas reduction and removal projects.

SPEAKERS:

- Ryan Alexander, Senior Fellow, Data Foundation
- David J. Hayes, Professor of Practice, Stanford Doerr School of Sustainability & Stanford Law School
- Catherine Atkin, Co-founder, Global Digital Single Market Data Alliance
- Anu Khan, Founder and Executive Director, Carbon Removal Standards Initiative
- Christopher Konek, Lead Scientist, Global Methane Hub
- Sonia Wang, Senior Advisor, Data Foundation (moderator)
