

HelpAlert App: World's First Elderly Check-In System app - Without Tech

HelpAlert offers auto welfare calls for the elderly, no smartphone or internet needed, - peace of mind for families. All performed silently in the background

ADELAIDE, SOUTH AUSTRALIA, AUSTRALIA, June 4, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- After revolutionizing home safety with the Safety Switch and the CareAlert Smart Dialler, Australian innovators Mike and Darren Steele have created another game-changer — and this time, it's a World first.

Introducing the HelpAlert App — the world's first elderly welfare check-in system that works without any smartphone, internet, or tech skills.

❑ No Apps for the elderly | ❑ No Wearables | ❑ No Buttons to Push
Instead:

- ❑ Automatic welfare calls and or medication reminder calls to landlines or mobiles
- ❑ Familiar pre-recorded voices from loved ones
- ❑ Up to 3 check-ins a day with built-in escalation if calls go un-answered.
- ❑ Completely silent – just peace of mind
- ❑ Costs less than a cup of coffee a week

Why It Matters:

In a world obsessed with high-tech solutions, HelpAlert dares to go simple — because our elderly don't need more tech. They need connection.

This isn't another wearable. It's not a panic button. It's an entirely new category of elderly care.
Why Now:

Across the U.S., millions of families juggle work, kids, and aging parents. HelpAlert fills that daily check-in gap quietly, affordably, and effectively, making it a lifeline for carers and seniors alike.

Perfect for TV & Talk Shows:

This father-and-son team has already saved thousands of lives in Australia with other innovative services. Now they're on a mission to bring HelpAlert to America first — and they're offering exclusive access to U.S. media ready to share a heartwarming, family-first innovation story.
