

Small Fix, Big Impact: ZD Stucco Repair Restores a Century-Old Home

ZD Stucco Repair recently completed a stucco restoration project on a 1920 Tudor-style home in the quiet neighborhood of Summit, New Jersey.

SUMMIT, NJ, UNITED STATES, May 30, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The project addressed hidden structural issues and preserved the historic integrity of the property.

During the initial inspection, ZD Stucco experts identified the absence of essential head flashing above a second-floor window—an issue that could lead to long-term water damage. To properly correct the problem, the team opened the stucco system above and below the window, revealing and replacing rotted plywood, then installed a moisture barrier system and head flashing to ensure lasting protection.

After reinstalling the stucco, the team skillfully matched the original texture and applied two coats of high-performance elastomeric paint, restoring the wall to its original appearance while enhancing its durability.

While small in scope, this recent stucco repair project highlights a widespread issue that often goes unnoticed.”

Zoltan Dicso, Founder

“While small in scope, this recent stucco repair project highlights a widespread issue that often goes unnoticed,” said Zoltan Dicso, Founder of ZD Stucco Repair. “Improper stucco installation and missing structural components like head flashing can quietly cause major damage over time.”
