A Prodigy's Passion

Born into a world that couldn't contain his brilliance, Charles J. Lewis IV began his academic journey at just 2 years old—attending Stony Brook Prep and reading at an adult level. With a vocabulary and comprehension far beyond his years, Lewis impressed educators and peers alike, even while struggling to connect socially. These early experiences laid the foundation for his lifelong passion for storytelling.

From Stage to Page

In adulthood, Lewis overcame his shyness by becoming a member of SAG-AFTRA and working as a professional actor. There, he refined his voice and presence—skills he now brings to the realm of fantasy literature. His writing is deeply immersive, weaving together adventure, magic, and emotional growth in a fresh, powerful narrative.

"Moonfall" – A Thrilling Quest Begins

In Moonfall, three teenage heroines—Ayala, Mei, and Nia—embark on a dangerous journey to master the legendary spell book, Sefer Ha'llham. With diverse cultural roots and unique powers, the trio faces treacherous realms, internal struggles, and the looming threat of the dark sorceress Malicia of Tenebrous. Only by uniting their strengths can they prevent the cosmos from falling into darkness.
