G-TELP currently offers six targeted English assessments, each designed to meet specific learner and professional needs:

- G-TELP Speaking Test – evaluates real-life communication skills through everyday topics.
- G-TELP Writing Test – measures structured writing ability across academic and personal contexts.

- G-TELP Level Test – assesses general English proficiency using practical listening and reading tasks.
- G-TELP Business Speaking Test – focuses on workplace communication through business-specific scenarios.
- G-TELP Business Writing Test – gauges writing clarity and effectiveness in professional settings.
- G-TELP Junior Test – designed to measure young learners’ English skills with age-appropriate content.

Each G-TELP English proficiency test is developed using the latest research from G-TELP and the International Testing Services Center (ITSC) Group. Our teams are actively conducting research in language assessment on learner performance, task effectiveness, and global communication needs, ensuring our exams remain accurate, relevant, and aligned with international standards.

“We know that test takers, institutions, and employers count on G-TELP for both accuracy and convenience,” said a G-TELP academic team member. “That’s why we’ve expanded IBT (internet-based testing) at-home options and designed our June to December schedule with flexibility in mind. Our researchers continue to collaborate with academic and AI communities to keep G-TELP globally relevant and grounded in research.”

The new schedule supports students, professionals, and institutions seeking a reliable and research-driven English assessment. Registration details and test dates are now available on the G-TELP website. With our continued focus on innovation and quality, G-TELP remains a trusted partner in language evaluation for today’s global environment.
