Edwin Blosser

About Edwin Blosser:

Edwin Blosser's journey from a rural farm to global innovation is rooted in faith, humility, and a passion for restoring the land. At just thirteen, a life-altering year shaped his path forever—first by giving his life to Jesus and then surviving an accident that deepened his purpose. That dual transformation became the foundation for everything he would go on to build.

Raised in an Amish-Mennonite home, Edwin combined traditional values with hands-on learning and a deep curiosity about how things work. He became a trailblazer in biological soil health, ultimately founding Midwest Bio-Systems, where he invented the Aeromaster Composting System. Now used in more than 30 countries, his equipment and methods help farmers and composters regenerate soil, reduce inputs, and work more efficiently—naturally and sustainably.

Edwin's core belief is that success comes when we make sense of the complex. He lives this out daily, bringing clarity to challenges that others find overwhelming. His solutions aren't just technical—they're deeply personal, created from a sense of calling rather than convenience.

Yet beyond the patents and progress, what defines Edwin most is his unwavering faith. He credits every success to the grace of God and approaches each challenge with humility, honesty, and gratitude. For Edwin, it's not about control—it's about surrender. And through that surrender, he has built a business and a life that reflect a higher purpose.
