/EINPresswire.com/ -- Rising artist Boxi Chen has released his latest single, Falling Apart—a sharp, high-energy punk-pop track that captures raw emotion and youthful urgency. Released just in time for summer, the song delivers a punchy, upbeat anthem.

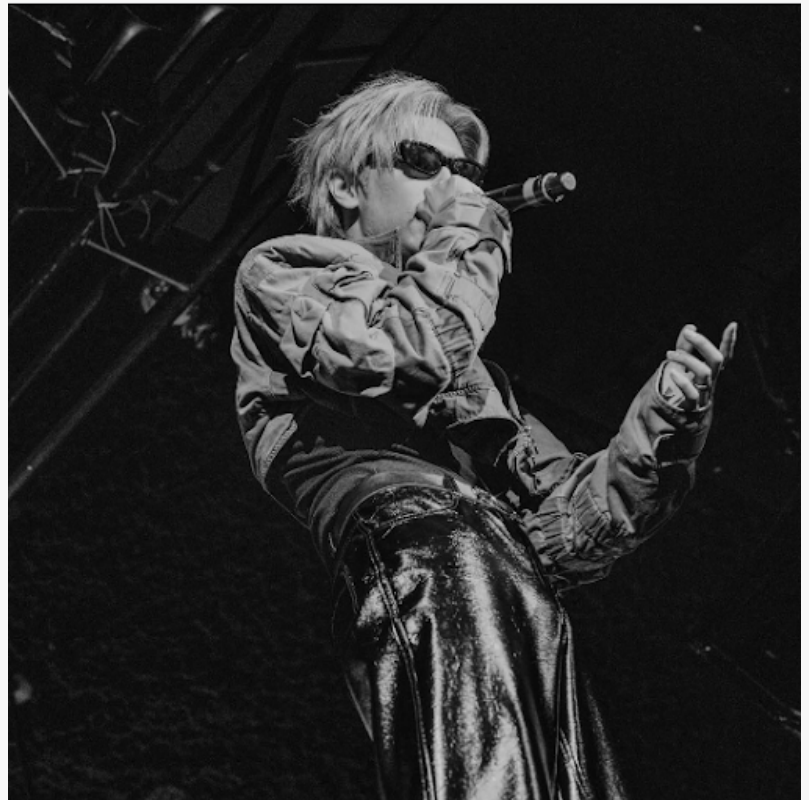

A Debut in New York and a Half-Year of Refinement

Falling Apart first caught attention during Boxi Chen's opening performance for a New York tour headlined by prominent Chinese rappers ICE (Changqing Yang) and Jialong Li. The live audience responded enthusiastically to the song's energetic melody and youthful vibe. However, instead of rushing the track to release, Chen chose to spend six months refining it.

Throughout this process, he collaborated closely with producers Yanqi Wang and Jonas, making detailed adjustments to the melodic arrangements, lyrics, rhythm, and vocal delivery. This commitment lasted six months, resulting in a carefully produced final version of the song.

Perfectly Timed for Summer

The decision to release Falling Apart in summer was intentional. Chen noted that the track's
