Unlike traditional treatment programs that often adhere to a standardized 30 to 90-day cycle, Red Door Life asserts that its model moves beyond what it terms a "car wash" approach. The 12 Dimensions of Life framework integrates support for various interconnected life areas, including physical and mental health, emotional well-being, spiritual connection, social relationships, financial stability, legal clarity, vocational aspirations, and environmental factors. This comprehensive integration aims to address the root causes of substance use, acknowledging that addiction frequently co-occurs with, or is influenced by, challenges in these other life domains.

"Addiction is a multifaceted condition that often extends beyond singular behavioral patterns or a temporary physiological dependence," stated a spokesperson for Red Door Life. "Our framework acknowledges the interconnectedness of an individual's well-being across multiple life dimensions. By focusing on these areas comprehensively, the objective is to support more robust and sustained recovery outcomes, preparing individuals for life beyond the treatment setting."

Red Door Life emphasizes a highly personalized care model, where treatment plans are not prescriptive but are instead developed based on the unique needs, goals, and life circumstances of each individual client. This includes the prioritization of trauma-based therapy, recognizing the frequent link between trauma and substance use. The center, situated in Bel Air with views of the Los Angeles Valley, provides a structured residential environment intended to facilitate healing and personal growth. The organization also explicitly states its commitment to inclusivity, creating an LGBTQIA+ affirming environment where all individuals are supported.

The 12 Dimensions of Life framework guides the entire spectrum of therapeutic protocols, from individual counseling sessions to group activities and educational workshops. This systematic integration is designed to ensure that all aspects of a client's life are considered in their recovery journey.
