Backflow can happen when there's a sudden change in water pressure in the supply line, and water begins to flow in the wrong direction. Backflow is dangerous because it can potentially pull harmful substances, such as pesticides, fertilizers, and other contaminants, from outdoor sprinkler systems, faucets, or even hose attachments.

"Backflow is a health and safety issue that we want to make all homeowners aware of," said Holly Reed, owner of Mr. Rooter Plumbing of Tallahassee. "It can cause a serious problem, but preventing it can be simple, and that's where we come in."

Mr. Rooter Plumbing of Tallahassee offers inspection, repair, and maintenance of backflow prevention systems. With licensed technicians available to ensure systems are running smoothly and complying with regulations, the team is prepared to keep water safe.

Homeowners in Tallahassee are encouraged to schedule a backflow prevention device inspection or to reach out with any concerns. Early detection can help avoid health risks and costly repairs and protect the water supply in the community.

"We are always available to answer any questions about backflow prevention and to diagnose any issues,” said Holly. “Our team is dedicated to keeping our community protected.”
