Quantum Space has selected Florida-based All Points Logistics, LLC (All Points) for spacecraft processing services for future Ranger missions.

COCOA, FL, UNITED STATES, June 12, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Quantum Space has selected Florida-based All Points Logistics, LLC \(All Points\) for spacecraft processing services for future Ranger missions. Beginning in 2026, All Points' new "Space Prep" service will support pre-launch Ranger integration and checkout in specialized facilities at NASA's Kennedy Space Center.

The Ranger spacecraft is an advanced, maneuverable, mission-adaptable platform designed to deliver space superiority across defense and commercial missions and extend the life and value of critical orbital assets for commercial and government satellites.

"We are excited to partner with All Points Logistics for our upcoming Ranger missions," said Sue Hall, Chief Operating Officer of Quantum Space. "Having an anchor organization with the facilities and expertise right here on the Space Coast is critical to our operational goals—particularly as payload processing and hosting become increasingly central to our future missions."

Located near NASA's iconic Vehicle Assembly Building, the main Space Prep complex at Kennedy Space Center will offer over 500,000 square feet of versatile and secure clean room processing bays, storage space, office space, and control centers. The facilities will be suitable for a variety of pre-launch assembly, integration, fueling, and test operations and provide a central coordination point for specialty transportation worldwide. For the first time, spacecraft operators can acquire everything needed to move a spacecraft from the factory to the launch pad and prepare it for flight from a single source with Space Prep.

Space Prep is a game changer for pre-launch ground operations. Together we are breaking new ground in operationally responsive space missions.”
