leading distance education provider, offering high school education and in-demand career training certificate and associate degree programs, has been awarded Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Elementary and Secondary Schools (MSA-CESS) accreditation for its high school program. This designation recognizes program excellence and adherence to education standards and regulations.

The Commissions on Elementary and Secondary Schools of the Middle States Association accredit early-childhood through post-secondary, non-degree granting public, private, faith-based educational institutions including special purpose schools, and learning services providers. The Commission's accreditation process ensures institutional accountability, self-appraisal, improvement, and innovation through peer review and the rigorous application of standards within the context of institutional mission.

“We are proud to be recognized as a DEAC and MSA-CESS accredited institution,” commented Megan Bowen, High School Director at U.S. Career Institute. “This milestone further validates our commitment to educational excellence and creating an environment that allows our students to achieve their educational and career goals.”

As an MSA-CESS accredited institution, U.S. Career Institute and the students it serves benefit from:

- Proven high-quality education
- Continuous program assessment and improvement
- Increased institutional credibility and trust

- Easier facilitation of transfer credits

U.S. Career Institute's online, self-paced high school program is designed specifically for the distance learner, enabling them to choose from general education or one of five in-demand career pathways in healthcare, business, paralegal services, fitness, or veterinary sciences. Our diverse student population is filled with individuals at various stages in their lives, all seeking one common goal – greater access to high-quality education and a fresh start in their respective career journeys.

"Earning a high school education is often the first step toward entering one of many in-demand career fields," Janet Perry, VP of Academics and Compliance at U.S. Career Institute said. "But not all high school programs are created equal, and choosing a non-accredited program can pose many challenges. That's one of the many reasons we take our accreditation and curriculum development so seriously. Our DEAC accredited, and now MSA-CESS accredited, high school program is a great option for students who are seeking an alternative path to earning their high school diploma. And even better, they can easily transition from high school into one of our certificate or associate degree programs to kickstart their new careers."

About U.S. Career Institute

Offering high quality, affordable and career-focused distance education, U.S. Career Institute has helped thousands enrich their lives and reach their career goals. Weston Distance Learning, U.S. Career Institute's parent company, has 40 years of experience in distance education, beginning in 1981. In addition to Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Elementary and Secondary Schools (MSA-CESS) accreditation for its high school program, all of U.S. Career Institute's program levels are accredited by the Distance Education Accrediting Commission. The Distance Education Accrediting Commission is listed by the U.S. Department of Education as a recognized accrediting agency. Because of this, USCI's curriculum, faculty, administrative procedures, and policies are frequently reviewed to ensure that USCI continues to meet high standards of quality and service.
