Africa's energy, oil, and gas industry is experiencing unprecedented momentum and the time to invest is now.

In 2024 alone, the African energy sector attracted over $120 billion in investments, with $75 billion directed toward oil and gas development. These record-breaking inflows reflect surging global demand, untapped reserves, and the steady rise of indigenous players reshaping the continent's energy narrative from within.

Today, Africa stands as one of the last frontiers for large scale energy exploration and expansion. From new natural gas discoveries in Mozambique and Senegal to oil rich fields in Namibia and Nigeria, the region is drawing renewed global interest from financiers, supermajors, EPC contractors, and independent producers alike.

Meanwhile, local companies are no longer spectators. Indigenous oil and gas firms now account for 35% of operational control across the continent up from just 20% ten years ago. This shift reflects not only improved technical capacity but also stronger regulatory backing for African-led development and ownership.

WHY NOW?

Africa is home to more than 125 billion barrels of proven oil reserves and 620 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. These resources are increasingly vital as global markets seek diversified, stable, and lower-emission supply chains. Yet, paradoxically, over 600 million Africans still lack access to reliable electricity a gap that offers both a moral and economic imperative for accelerated investment.

“

The future belongs to those who prepare for it today... Africa's energy destiny will not be written by chance but by bold choices, shared vision, and unwavering action.”

Noah Ajare

As countries build frameworks under the African Continental Free Trade Area (AfCFTA) projected to unlock a $3.4 trillion market energy infrastructure stands at the heart of Africa's economic future.

“Africa is not just rich in resources it is rich in possibilities. The time to act is now.”

“The future belongs to those who prepare for it today. With a Population of over 1.5 Billion, Africa’s energy destiny will not be written by chance—but by bold choices, shared vision, and unwavering action. Too often, we delay our dreams waiting for the perfect timing, the right tools, or a bigger platform. But the truth is - greatness begins in the ordinary. It is time to “Get it Right”, it is time to end Energy Poverty in Africa”
