This recognition highlights Roa's contribution to advancing leadership excellence in the global development sector. She joins a distinguished group of winners, including Disney, PBS, Mastercard, IBM, and the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs.

The Communicator Awards, judged by the Academy of Interactive and Visual Arts (AIVA), is the leading international awards program recognizing outstanding achievement across marketing, corporate communications, public relations, and design. In its 30th year, the program has received over 3,000 entries worldwide.

Focused on the critical first 90 days of a Chief of Party's (Project Director) tenure, Roa's podcast delivers strategic, actionable guidance for executives leading complex, multimillion-dollar programs. She draws on decades of field experience in over 50 countries through concise, practical episodes to equip leaders with tools for donor engagement, team alignment, and operational success.

Expert collaboration drove the podcast's success. BigBlue Communications led post-production to ensure broadcast-level quality, and TM Design, Inc. developed the podcast's branding and visual identity. Angela Tan and Gabriella Gonzales contributed to the project, and the Partnerships Incubator's translation team provided high-quality French, Spanish, and Arabic versions. The project hired seven voice actors to voice the series' promos and stingers.
